PROFESSOR ROSS' LECTURES DISPLEASE MRS. STANFORD

Noted Sociologist Resigns His Position Because His Opinions Conflict With Those of the Patroness of the Palo Alto University.

S

EDWARD J. ROSS, Professor of Sociology at Stanford University, has resigned his position because of what he terms a conflict of interests between the professor and the trustees of the university. Ross has been a faculty member at Stanford for nine years and has been the chairman of the sociology department for the past four years. He is one of the most respected scholars in the field of sociology in this country.

Ross' resignation was announced by the university president, Dr. Edward J. Ross, on Monday afternoon. The decision was reached after several weeks of discussion between Ross and the trustees. Ross said he had been informed that his views on certain social problems did not coincide with those of the trustees.

Ross said that he had offered to resign several times in the past, but that he had been persuaded by the trustees to remain. He said that he had been offered a position at another university if he had decided to leave Stanford.

Ross is the author of several books on sociology and has written numerous articles on the subject. He is a frequent contributor to the American Journal of Sociology.

Ross' resignation will take effect at the end of the academic year. He will continue to teach at Stanford for the remainder of the year, but he will not return to the university in the fall.

Ross is one of the most respected scholars in the field of sociology in this country. He is a frequent contributor to the American Journal of Sociology.

twelve thousand decaying corpses of murdered chinese in amur river women and children among the victims of russian atrocity, and no one will ever know the exact number of unfortunates perishing by shot, sword and drowning.

government operation on the amur river, north china, under cover, secret and complete, as forudson operation.